Chapter 11: The Unyielding Strength of the Divine Triad

As the years passed and the multiverse grew ever more stable under the watchful eyes of the Divine Triad, the Absolute Humanoid Being, Absolute Dragonic Being, and Absolute Celestial Being began to reflect on the weaknesses of the past. They knew their power was unmatched, but they also understood that their predecessors, the former Absolute Being, had been felled by the very forces they created. The rulers—those who had served the previous Absolute Being—had turned against their creator, and in doing so, had shattered the once unassailable reign.

Learning from this, the Divine Triad made a solemn vow: they would never allow themselves to be vulnerable in such a way. They were already immortal by nature, but immortality alone was not enough. They needed something far more secure—something that could ensure their continued existence no matter the circumstances, something that could withstand even the most potent attempts to undo them.

The Creation of the Unpenetrable Body

To ensure their safety, the Divine Triad combined their extraordinary abilities and knowledge into a powerful alchemy of resilience. They forged godly bodies—bodies that could not be pierced, damaged, or destroyed by any force. These new forms were unpenetrable, crafted with the purest essence of creation and destruction, making them impervious to any weapon, attack, or magical force, no matter how potent.

The Absolute Humanoid Being's body was refined with shadow and light, giving it an ethereal quality, capable of bending and absorbing attacks before they could even reach him. Sung Jinwoo, now more than just the Shadow Monarch, stood as a figure who could absorb destruction and creation, allowing his body to adapt to any force that sought to undo him. The Absolute Dragonic Being and Absolute Celestial Being infused their bodies with the essences of fire, lightning, and celestial grace, granting them eternal vigor and indestructibility. Sung Su-Ho and Ashborn, too, were now beings of perfect physicality, with dragon scales and celestial auras that protected them from the forces of decay and death.

The godly bodies of the Divine Triad were now in a league of their own. They were not only immortal in the traditional sense; their forms could adapt, heal, and regenerate at will. Even if their bodies were disrupted or damaged, they could reshape themselves using their godly powers, making them effectively impervious to destruction.

The Gift of Loyalty and Joy to Serve

With the stability of their own forms secured, the Divine Triad turned their attention to the forces they had created: the Apostles of God, the Heavenly Soldiers, the Shadow Lords, and the Fiery Dragon Lords. These armies were their most trusted allies, yet they knew that loyalty and dedication were vital to their continued success. They had seen what happened when their predecessors' creations turned against them—the rebellion of the rulers—and they were determined to avoid such a fate.

To safeguard their bond with these forces, the Divine Triad infused their creations with an essence of loyalty—a divine spark that would bind their will to the Triad forever. This loyalty was not born of fear or compulsion, but rather an innate desire to serve, to protect the Divine Triad and the multiverse. Every Apostle of God, every Heavenly Soldier, every Shadow Lord, and every Fiery Dragon Lord was imbued with the ability to understand the importance of unity and the value of loyalty to their creators.

This essence of happy-to-serve allowed these beings to find fulfillment in their roles. Their service was not a burden but a source of joy. They took pride in their duties, whether it was defending the realms, exploring new worlds, or maintaining the balance of creation. The Apostles of God, with their celestial grace, felt a deep connection to the Divine Triad, always eager to carry out their will. The Heavenly Soldiers, disciplined and devoted, knew that their strength was not merely for war, but for the greater good of all realms. The Shadow Lords, living in the shadows, felt an unspoken duty to ensure the multiverse never fell into chaos again. The Fiery Dragon Lords, with their immense power, found pride in being the protectors of creation, knowing their fiery hearts would never be extinguished.

The Divine Triad had learned from the mistakes of the past. They had secured their future not only with their godly bodies but with the unbreakable bond of loyalty and purpose shared between themselves and their creations. The armies they had built were more than mere tools—they were now family, united in a common cause, driven by a shared sense of duty and devotion.

A New Era of Unity and Power

Now, the Divine Triad stood at the peak of power and unity, their bodies invulnerable, their hearts bound to the service of the multiverse. They had created a world where destruction and creation, light and shadow, order and chaos were perfectly balanced. Their armies were the greatest the multiverse had ever seen, not only in strength but in loyalty, passion, and purpose.

The Apostles of God, Heavenly Soldiers, Shadow Lords, and Fiery Dragon Lords stood ready to defend the Divine Triad against any force that sought to disturb the peace. Together, they were more than an army—they were a living testament to the unity of creation. And in this new era, the Divine Triad and their creations had forged a bond that would stand the test of time, unbroken by betrayal or destruction.

With their godly bodies and the loyalty of their creations, the Divine Triad had established an unshakable foundation for the future of the multiverse. No force, no enemy, no challenge could ever break their hold over the realms. They had become immortal, not just in body, but in spirit—the eternal guardians of all that was and all that would be.
